

Saudi PDPL for Marketers: Consent, Direct Marketing and Privacy-Compliant Campaigns

Saudi PDPL for Marketers: Consent, Direct Marketing and Privacy-Compliant Campaigns

Technical depth: Practitioner · Practical mode: Case study

Introduction

Since the Saudi Personal Data Protection Law PDPL became enforceable, every email, SMS, WhatsApp message and audience upload that uses personal data must rest on a lawful basis, and direct marketing requires prior consent and a clear way to opt out. Many marketing teams still rely on legacy databases, purchased lists and undocumented consent. This coreconcept KSA course equips marketing, CRM and privacy managers to run campaigns that meet the PDPL, its Implementing Regulations and CST messaging rules, benchmarked against international privacy standards. Participants leave with a PDPL Direct Marketing Compliance Pack for their organisation.

Course Objectives

- Apply the Saudi PDPL and its Implementing Regulations to email, SMS, WhatsApp, social media and call-centre marketing
- Determine the lawful basis for each marketing activity and document it in a record of processing activities
- Design consent capture, consent records and opt-out mechanisms that satisfy PDPL Article 25 and ISO/IEC 29184 controls
- Align SMS and messaging campaigns with CST anti-spam requirements and sender name registration rules
- Assess high-risk practices, including purchased lists, profiling, audience uploads and cross-border martech, and set controls for each
- Produce a PDPL Direct Marketing Compliance Pack ready for review by the data protection officer

Target Audience

- Marketing and CRM managers responsible for campaigns that use customer personal data
 - Digital marketing managers responsible for tracking, audiences and advertising platforms
 - Data protection officers and privacy managers who approve marketing processing
 - Customer experience and loyalty programme managers who run customer communications
 - Compliance and legal managers advising commercial teams on marketing activity
 - Agency account managers delivering campaigns for clients operating in Saudi Arabia

Why Attend This Course

- Return with a PDPL Direct Marketing Compliance Pack for your own organisation, reviewed by a peer panel
- Keep campaigns running while removing the practices most likely to draw complaints and regulatory attention
- Explain to marketing colleagues, agencies and vendors exactly what consent and opt-out records must show
- Compare approaches with marketing, CRM and privacy managers from retail, healthcare, banking and services

Conclusion

Privacy-compliant marketing is the condition for keeping a contactable customer base that trusts the organisation. This course moves from the scope of the Saudi PDPL and the lawful bases for marketing, through Article 25, the Implementing Regulations, CST messaging rules and international consent standards, to consent design, preference management and the high-risk practices that draw complaints. The final day turns this material into a PDPL Direct Marketing Compliance Pack that participants take back to their marketing and privacy teams.
