Ref: 403_13670 Date: 19 – 23 October 2026 Location: Paris - Right Bank business hotel Fees: 23500 SAR

Introduction:

News writing and editing standards slip when copy reaches the desk with the key fact buried in paragraph four, unattributed quotes, unchecked figures and headlines that promise more than the story delivers, and each correction erodes audience trust. This Core Concept course gives reporters, sub-editors and communication staff a working method for judging what is news, structuring stories with the inverted pyramid, writing leads, headlines and captions, verifying sources and sub-editing to a house style for print, web, social and short video. Participants compile a News Story Portfolio and Newsdesk Style Sheet.

Course Objectives:

- Judge the newsworthiness of incoming events and announcements using recognised news values and rank stories for publication
- Structure hard news stories with the inverted pyramid and write summary leads that answer who, what, when, where, why and how
- Gather material through planned interviews and a documented source hierarchy, and attribute quotes accurately
- Write headlines, standfirsts and captions, and convert official announcements and press releases into publishable news stories
- Sub-edit copy to length and house style, verify claims and user content before publication, and publish corrections transparently
- Adapt one news story for web, social media and a short video script, and assemble a News Story Portfolio and Newsdesk Style Sheet

Target Audience:

- Staff who report and write news stories for newspapers, agencies, broadcasters and news websites
 - Desk staff who sub-edit, headline and check copy before publication
 - Media unit staff in public bodies who turn official decisions and events into news items
 - Corporate communication staff who write news for internal channels, newsrooms and websites
 - Digital and social media staff who publish news updates, posts and short videos

Why Attend This Course:

- Return with a News Story Portfolio and Newsdesk Style Sheet that your desk can adopt for daily copy
- Spend less desk time rewriting copy because stories arrive with the lead, attribution and structure already right
- Publish fewer corrections by applying a repeatable check of names, numbers, quotes and user content before release
- Compare desk practice with reporters, sub-editors and communication staff from media outlets, public bodies and companies

Conclusion:

Readers decide in the first lines whether a story is worth their time, and they judge an outlet by the accuracy of every name, number and quote. The week moves from news values and story selection through the inverted pyramid and lead writing to interviewing, sourcing, headlines and captions, then to sub-editing, verification, ethics, corrections and digital formats. The final day applies the method to breaking and public service stories across text, social and short video, and closes with a News Story Portfolio and Newsdesk Style Sheet.
