Ref: 1553_25077 Date: 23 May – 3 June 2027 Location: Dammam - Eastern Province five-star Fees: 35100 SAR

Introduction:

Counter-terrorism and national security management across prevention, protection and preparedness is the subject of this 10-day course for security, police, intelligence analysis, critical infrastructure and emergency management managers, who build a Multi-Agency Counter-Terrorism Preparedness Plan for a case city. Terrorist threats exploit the gaps between agencies, so prevention work, protective security, financial controls and crisis response are often planned separately and exercised too rarely. Nominees already manage security, policing or emergency functions, and teaching is by case study at policy and management level. CoreConcept Training Center delivers this counter-terrorism course.

Course Objectives:

- Explain terrorism, violent extremism and radicalisation drivers at a conceptual level and brief senior leaders on the current threat landscape
- Align a unit's counter-terrorism activity with the prevent, protect, pursue and prepare pillars and the UN Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy
- Assess terrorist threat and set priorities linked to threat levels using intent, capability and vulnerability judgements
- Plan preventing violent extremism, rehabilitation and counter-narrative measures with community, online and statutory partners
- Specify protective security, insider threat and terrorist financing controls that respect legal frameworks and human rights safeguards
- Coordinate multi-agency information sharing, crisis response, consequence management and exercises, and record lessons learned

Target Audience:

 - Police and law enforcement managers who coordinate counter-terrorism prevention and response activity
 - Intelligence analysis managers who produce terrorism threat assessments for decision makers

Why Attend This Course:

- Deliver a Multi-Agency Counter-Terrorism Preparedness Plan to the head of security and partner agency leads for a case city
- Decide which threat-level responses, prevention measures and protective controls to prioritise when resources are limited
- Avoid duplicated effort, unshared warnings and legal challenge caused by uncoordinated or disproportionate counter-terrorism measures
- Brief colleagues using the threat assessment template, pillar matrix and after-action review method from the course

Conclusion:

Back at work, the participant presents the Multi-Agency Counter-Terrorism Preparedness Plan to the head of security, the police lead and partner agencies, who use it to agree threat-level responses, prevention priorities and coordination arrangements. Site managers adopt the protective security and reporting measures, and emergency planners schedule the first joint exercise from it. After that exercise, the unit should review the after-action findings, update the threat assessment and lessons learned register, and revise the actions and owners in the plan.

Frequently Asked Questions FAQ:

What should participants know before a counter-terrorism and national security course?

Participants should already manage security, policing, intelligence analysis, critical infrastructure or emergency functions. No prior counter-terrorism training is needed. Anonymised examples of their organisation's threat assessments, security plans or exercise reports help during the case study.

How does this counter-terrorism and national security course differ from a physical security or organised crime course?

It addresses terrorism strategy across prevention, protection, legal safeguards and response at policy level. Site security design, crime network investigation and financial compliance controls appear only briefly, as inputs managers draw on when planning counter-terrorism preparedness.

Why do counter-terrorism and national security strategies need human rights safeguards?

Safeguards keep counter-terrorism measures lawful, proportionate and accountable, which protects public trust and community cooperation. The UN Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy treats respect for human rights and the rule of law as a fundamental basis of the fight against terrorism.

What do participants take back from the counter-terrorism and national security course?

Participants return with a Multi-Agency Counter-Terrorism Preparedness Plan for a case city, including a threat assessment, pillar priorities, protective and prevention actions, a coordination timeline and an exercise schedule, ready to adapt to their own organisation.
