Sports Coach Education Programme Course: Licensing Levels, Coach Developers and CPD

Ref: 2056_30103 Date: 22 – 26 February 2027 Location: London - Central London four-star Fees: 23000 SAR

Introduction:

Sports coach education programme management, covering licensing levels, coach developers and CPD, is a 1-week course for coach education departments, technical directorates and coach workforce units, ending with a Coach Education and Development Plan. Many sport bodies issue coaching licences on attendance alone, rely on a few overstretched tutors and keep incomplete coach registers, so clubs field unqualified coaches and licence holders stop learning once certified. Nominees already run coaching courses, licence administration or tutor teams, and teaching is by case study on real syllabi, assessment files and register extracts. CoreConcept Training Center delivers this sports coach education course.

Course Objectives:

- Profile a coach workforce by licence level, sport, activity status and deployment gaps against club and squad demand
- Structure a coach licensing ladder with entry requirements, learning hours, assessed competences and progression rules
- Design competency-based coach education syllabi with learning outcomes, practical coaching tasks and blended delivery
- Recruit, train and calibrate coach developers who act as tutors, assessors and mentors
- Run CPD credit schemes, licence revalidation cycles and mentoring arrangements that keep licence holders current
- Assemble a Coach Education and Development Plan with quality assurance checks and resource lines for a case organisation

Target Audience:

- Units responsible for designing and scheduling coaching courses and licence levels in a federation or league
 - Technical directorate teams accountable for coaching standards across member clubs and academies
 - Coach developer leads who manage tutors, assessors and mentors and their deployment

Why Attend This Course:

- Deliver a Coach Education and Development Plan to the technical director, the federation board and the funding ministry for approval
- Decide which licence levels to open, revise or retire, and how many tutors and assessors each intake needs
- Avoid unqualified coaches on club benches, inconsistent assessment decisions and lapsed licences that go unnoticed
- Brief tutors, assessors, mentors and club officials on the shared syllabus, marking rubric and revalidation rules

Conclusion:

Back at work, the participant presents the Coach Education and Development Plan to the technical director, the federation board and funding partners. The board uses it to approve licence levels, syllabus changes, the size of the coach developer pool and the CPD and revalidation rules, while the licence administration team uses its register section to update records and reports. After the first full intake and revalidation round under the plan, the department should review pass rates, assessor consistency, licence renewals and club coverage, then adjust levels, tutor deployment and CPD credits.

Frequently Asked Questions FAQ:

What should participants know before a sports coach education programme course?

Participants should already run coaching courses, licence administration, a tutor or assessor team or coaching standards for clubs. Coaching at elite level is not needed. Bringing an anonymised syllabus, assessment form or coach register extract helps apply the case work to their own organisation.

How does a sports coach education programme course differ from a high-performance sport or leadership coaching course?

It treats coaches as a licensed workforce: licence levels, syllabi, tutors and assessors, CPD, revalidation and registers. High-performance courses manage athlete pathways and science support, and leadership coaching courses teach managers to coach staff at work.

Why does sports coach education need trained coach developers and not only course content?

Licence quality depends on who teaches and assesses. Trained, calibrated tutors and assessors observe real coaching, give feedback and mark against the same rubric, so a licence at any level means the same competence wherever it was issued.

What do participants take back from the sports coach education programme course?

Participants take back a Coach Education and Development Plan with a workforce census, a licence ladder, a syllabus map, a coach developer pool plan, an assessment rubric, CPD and revalidation rules and a quality assurance checklist.
