Introduction

Official correspondence carries an organisation's decisions, commitments and reputation, yet many letters leave with inconsistent formats, weak structure, grammatical errors and a tone that does not suit the reader. Each correction costs a manager's time, and an unclear circular or decision can be misapplied across a whole organisation. This Core Concept course equips administrative staff to draft official and administrative correspondence in accurate, clear Modern Standard Arabic, from letters and memoranda to circulars, decisions and minutes. Participants work on realistic case correspondence and leave with a Correspondence Style Guide and Template Pack.

Course Objectives

- Distinguish the purpose, structure and approval route of letters, memoranda, circulars, administrative decisions and minutes
- Draft official Arabic correspondence with correct forms of address, reference details and closing formulas
- Apply Modern Standard Arabic administrative register, punctuation and spelling rules accurately
- Write clear, concise texts using plain language principles and a logical paragraph structure
- Handle sensitive, confidential and bilingual correspondence with appropriate tone and controls
- Produce a Correspondence Style Guide and Template Pack for use in one's own unit

Target Audience

- Administrative officers who draft and issue letters, memoranda and circulars
- Secretaries and office coordinators preparing correspondence for managers' signature
- Correspondence unit staff who register, route and file incoming and outgoing mail
- Specialist staff in HR, finance and procurement who write formal replies to internal and external parties
- Team coordinators who record meeting minutes and follow up decisions

Why Attend This Course

- Return to work with a Correspondence Style Guide and Template Pack that brings consistency to every outgoing letter
- Draft letters that managers sign without repeated corrections to language or format
- Answer complaints, refusals and sensitive matters in a tone that protects the organisation's reputation
- Compare correspondence practice with administrative staff from different sectors, organisations and countries

Conclusion

Well-drafted correspondence lets a decision travel through an organisation without misunderstanding or delay. The course moves from the types and anatomy of official documents, through the language, punctuation and plain language standards that govern them, to drafting letters, memoranda, circulars, decisions and minutes, and then to the sensitive, bilingual and confidential cases that test accuracy. The final day's correspondence clinic turns this into a Correspondence Style Guide and Template Pack for each participant's own unit.
