HR Policies and Procedures Writing: Building the HR Policy Manual

Introduction:

Many HR teams run on scattered memos, inherited templates and unwritten practice, so leave, attendance, travel and grievance cases are handled differently from one manager to the next and employees cannot find the rule that applies to them. This Core Concept course builds the skill of writing HR policies and procedures that employees understand and line managers apply consistently. Participants draft real HR policy clauses, convert them into procedure flows and HR forms, check them against employment law in general terms, and assemble an HR Policy Manual Draft for their own organisation.

Course Objectives:

- Structure an HR policy manual around a clear hierarchy of HR policies, HR procedures and HR forms
- Draft HR policy clauses in plain, unambiguous language using a standard HR policy template
- Write the core HR policies on recruitment, leave, attendance, conduct, grievance, performance, business travel and remote work
- Convert each HR policy into a step-by-step HR procedure with swimlane flows and supporting HR forms
- Check HR policy clauses against applicable employment law and internal consistency before approval
- Launch, communicate and periodically review the HR policy manual with employee acknowledgement records

Target Audience:

- HR officers who answer employee queries on leave, attendance and entitlements
- HR generalists who draft and update HR policy documents and HR forms
- HR operations staff who run day-to-day HR procedures and records

- Give employees and line managers one consistent answer on leave, attendance, travel and remote work questions
- Reduce disputes caused by vague or contradictory HR wording before they reach a grievance
- Compare HR policy practice with HR practitioners from other sectors and countries

Conclusion:

HR policies only work when employees can read them, managers apply them the same way and HR can show when each was approved and last reviewed. This course moves from the policy-procedure-form hierarchy and a health check of existing HR documents, through manual architecture and drafting standards, to writing the core HR policies, procedures and forms and checking them against employment law. The final day applies these methods to multi-sector cases and produces an HR Policy Manual Draft that participants can take through their own approval route.
